Gender equity in theory is interesting, in action it's life changing.

It remains clear that for many of us, we need to know more about the steps we can take to contribute to change needed to deliver real equity into our workplaces and beyond. There's never been a better time to do this than now, especially as International Women's Day draws closer and the topic again becomes forefront in our minds.

This panel discussion will provide participants with an opportunity to hear from three leaders about the work they and their organisations are undertaking with the aim to improve gender equity on a global, national and local scale.

They are three great speakers each with a different lens on how to approach gender equity for their stakeholders. The event will provide an opportunity for participants to explore what gender equity looks like in contemporary workplaces. They'll share with us the initiatives they are implementing and provide us with examples of actionable steps that we can take back to our own workplaces.

This event will be of particular interest to leaders, diversity and inclusion practitioners, Human Resource professionals and others with an interest in actively, effectively improving gender equity in their workplaces.

Please book early to secure your place as this is expected to be a popular event and SPOTS ARE LIMITED! www.eeon.org.au As a not for profit EEON thanks you for purchasing a ticket.

Speakers:

- Morgan Koegel, CEO of OneGirl:

Morgan Koegel, at 25 years old is the CEO of One Girl. Previously Morgan has been the Sector Development Manager of Prison Legal Education Australia where she worked in prisons across Victoria, and CEO of Engage Education, a not-for-profit keeping Australian students from low socio-economic backgrounds in school. She is a passionate believer that fighting for gender equity in education can be a worldwide game-changer. One Girl is on a mission to educate one million girls across Africa – just a fraction of the estimated 63 million girls around the world who are denied an education every year. The Melbourne based organisation is female-focussed and is setting fire to the status quo in the not-for-profit world.

- Fiona Rose, Diversity and Inclusion Manager for Jacobs: (A WGEA Employer of Choice for Gender Equality):

Fiona is a Fellow of the CIPD (UK) and a Communications graduate with 25 years of experience in senior management, Organisation Development and Human Resources. She is currently the Diversity and Inclusion Manager for Jacobs, working closely with the APAC CEO on D&I strategy development and implementation. Fiona's experience covers the private, public and not for profit sectors in the UK; and subsequently within the consulting sector in Australia for KPMG, Ernst & Young and Jacobs (formerly known as Sinclair Knight Merz).

- Amanda Barker, General Manager of Community, Diversity and Inclusion for Carlton Football Club:

An accomplished leader, Amanda's roles have encompassed strategy and policy development, community engagement, meaningful high level stakeholder engagement, people management and leadership. During her years in Senior Management for the Australian Government, Amanda developed successful and impacting strategies and led the implementation of four national education initiatives and campaigns. Now at Carlton Football Club, she is an engaging speaker and an expert in her space.
